Highlight Event

NIDA Summer Camp 2014

During June 17 – 26, 2014, the National Institute of Development Administration (NIDA organized the 3rd Summer Camp on "Sustainable Tourism" which was open for both international and Thai students with several of educational backgrounds. Over 100 college students across Asia and European countries joined the 10 days program. The highlights of this event comprised of a reception party, academic sessions, group discussions, Thai course as well as field trips to the Grand Palace, the Ayutthaya Historical Study Centre, several community-based tourism attractions. Last but not least, the Summer Camp was ended with a memorable farewell party at the Phu View Resort, Nakorn Ratchasima Province.

"Sustainable Tourism" was the theme for this 3rd Summer Camp 2014. The objectives of this program were to reinforce and strengthen the vision of NIDA to be a world-class university while helping increase visibility and awareness of NIDA as a state academic institution among Thai and international students. Also under the theme of sustainable tourism, the program was another way to show the world that NIDA can be a hub of learning, not only for Thai students but students from all over the world. More importantly, the program aimed to create the opportunities for sharing idea and knowledge, creating networks and learning experience with other by accepting and understanding each other and their cultural differences. Last but not least, the Summer Camp was another significant way to make foreigners see that Thailand is still a great and safe destination to visit regardless of the recent political crisis.
