The National Institute of Development Administration (NIDA) Thailand organized the 2nd Summer Camp on "Green Economy" which held from June 18 – 27, 2013 at NIDA Bangkok. The activity is open for overseas and domestic students with any academic background. The highlights of the program include a welcome reception party, academic sessions, group discussion, Thai language course, also a field trip to Pattaya where is a popular beach resort on the Gulf of Thailand, and a memorable farwell party in Kanchanaburi Province.

"Green Economy" is the chosen topic for the Summer Camp this year. The discussion on this topic does not address the issues of eco-friendly, improved human well-being and social equity, yet also touch upon the value of no corruption, ethnics, principles and moral conducts.

All applicants submitted their essays, reflecting their idea of how could the concept of "Green Economy" be applicable to the analysis of your own standpoint as a member of Global Citizenship?" Associate Professor Dr. Pradit Wanarat, the president of NIDA also give a big Thanks to everyone who participated in our project. He also mentioned on behalf of NIDA and Office of International Affairs (OIA) that "We were delighted to receive so many entries (almost 200 in total). Finally we have 48 winners who have English skills and outstanding paper with critical analysis on their essay, ranging from Cambodia, China, Honduras, Indonesia, Iran, Korea, Malaysia, Philippines, Taiwan, Sao Tome & Principe, Thailand and Vietnam. For successful candidates, NIDA provides convenience services which include admission to all the activities, accommodation, food and beverages, local travel expenses, entrance fees, activity materials, and personal insurance. , However, participants will be responsible for their own flights fares."
